The root cause of children's problems lies in caste, class and gender-based discrimination along with problems such as displacement from land and government apathy. These issues lead to problems like unemployment, crumbling infrastructure for health and education and social biases.

- commitment to children
- •Nascent initiatives rural, tribal, or urban
- •Projects in areas where no other projects/facilities exist
  - Working with local government agencies and programs
- Selected based on the issues they work with
- Selected based on the impact on the community they work with
- External project audits
- Frequent financial reviews on book-keeping
- •Financial Risk Management modules to help identify projects where funds may be at risk due to poor financial management
- influence policy to positively impact the situation of Indian children
- Providing a platform for partners to meet, share, and learn from each other's experiences which also enables the strengthening of field level initiatives

CRY America's activities are aimed at achieving the long-term outcome of creating a just society in which all children enjoy the rights of survival, protection, development, and participation. In order to achieve this, CRY America ensures various processes are done to make sure your money passes through the right hands in order to reach the right people.